A Year of Celebration-A Century of Making a Difference

Boy scouts surveying the landscape from a higher vantage, Santa Rosa Plateau, California.

The Boy Scouts of America's mission is simple—it's to build the character and integrity of youth and prepare them to become responsible adults. Adults who are leaders, who have chosen to live in accordance with the Scout Oath and Law. Every youth and adult Scout lives by this set of principles laid down more than a century ago in the UK. Those principles challenge every Scout to be dutiful to God, country, others, and self.

Now, nearly 100 years later, the Boy Scouts of America is preparing to celebrate its 100th Anniversary. For 100 years, the Boy Scouts of America has created a strong foundation of leadership, service, and community for millions of America's youth. BSA celebrates this legacy as it reaffirms its commitment to America and to the world to inspire and prepare future generations of leaders.

To assist with program development and membership growth opportunities around the world, the Boy Scouts of America maintains an International Department. This department works closely with the World Scout Committee, the World Scout Bureau, the bureau's six regional offices, and the World Scout Foundation to help ensure quality Scouting.

needed. A great example of how this brotherhood of world Scouting transcends borders and cultures to assist young people from all walks of life to become better citizens. Currently there are 160 National Scout Associations representing some 220 countries and territories that belong to the World Organization of the Scout Movement.

As they prepare for their 2010 Anniversary, former Scouts, supportive family members, dedicated volunteers and professionals, and community leaders, can see all of the activities planned around the 100th Anniversary by visiting www.scouting.org/100years

From the Ambassador

Each day, thousands of people around the world donate their time and talents to improve their communities. Americans are no exception—across the United States there are millions of ordinary citizens doing extraordinary things. One organization that has promoted civic-mindedness and community activism for almost 100 years is the Boy Scouts. Through various activities and projects, Scouts learn the importance of being engaged in service. Volunteering, however, does not require a formal organization. Often, it just means looking for good opportunities. Is there a sports team you could coach? Or what about mentoring a young student? Get involved! We can all help others in small but meaningful ways and I encourage you to lend a helping hand this summer.

Scouts in Tunisia: Helping Build a Better World

One of the most dynamic youth associations in Tunisia is undoubtedly the Tunisian Scout movement, offering outdoor activities to children and youth throughout the country.

Celebrating this year its 75th anniversary, the Tunisian Scouts Organization includes over fifty thousand members of both genders active in nearly 400 groups spread throughout the country.

Scouting in Tunisia started in 1934. When Tunisia won independence in 1956, scouts constituted the bulk of police and National Guard troops due to their hierarchical structure, sense of discipline, and commitment to serve the community.

Today, Tunisian scouts are present in most cities and villages, teaching children and youth basic scouting principles including love of the environment, esprit de corps and team work, in addition to self-reliance and willingness to serve others.

Tunisian scouts are also heavily engaged in community service through partnership agreements signed with major governmental and nongovernmental institutions and organizations. Success stories include the training of thousands of peer educators in the field of reproductive healthcare, ecological parks preservation and literacy programs in favor of the underprivileged.

Citizenship values and principles repesent the programming core. Young scouts of all ages learn basic democracy and civic rules through mock elections, children's parliaments, and forums on hot topics.

At the 2007 World Scout Jamboree in England

In 2005, Tunisia hosted the 37th World Scout Conference with more than 1200 participants representing over 160 countries. Every year nearly 600 scouts take part in international exchange pro-grams, including this year, two young leaders volunteering in summer camps in the United States of America within the framework of an exchange agreement with the BSA.

Near East & South Asia Ugrad program (NESA)

Home in Tunisia: Sfax

Home in the U.S.: Clarion, Pennsylvania

Fondest memory of the U.S.: Its hard to choose one memory because I really enjoyed every moment I spent in Clarion and in other places around the U.S. But one of my best memories was the day we spent in Hollywood. I never imagined that one day I would be walking on Hollywood Boulevard, and seeing all of those things that I used to watch on TV. I enjoyed visiting Universal Studios and Long Beach. That trip to California was really amazing!

My experience: I went to Clarion University of Pennsylvania. I was among 13 other students who came from different Arab countries as part of the NESA program. Clarion University had a beautiful campus, with wonderful green landscapes. I was part of the Clarion international student association and the international soccer team. I lived in Nair Hall with the other international students. We had outstanding people working in the international office who were there for us all the time.

Lessons learned: I will cherish my NESA experience for the rest of my life. This program made me appreciate the true value of friendship and allowed me to meet people from all over the world. Now I am proud to say that I have a home and a friend in different countries. Moreover, this experience has certainly gave me a lot of academic skills that I didn't have before and it also given me the chance to learn about American culture and customs. I learned that being Tunisian is something that made me special around campus. I tried to represent my country and my culture in the best possible way. A lot of my American friends fell in love with Tunisia even without being there and most of them want to fly here someday.

Advice for others: The NESA program is an amazing experience that could not be described in simple words. It is about meeting people and sharing things you learned in your home country. It is about changing stereotypes and experiencing a new life. I would advise anyone to apply for this program because it changed me positive ways. I advise them to enjoy every moment they spend in the U.S. and learn as much as they can.

What I miss most about the U.S.: I miss the friends that I made there. I miss being an international student. I miss my daily life in Clarion and all of the activities that I used to do while I was there. Being a Clarion student gave me the feeling that I was part of a big family. I was simply proud of wearing my university colors and experiencing the life of a U.S. university student. I also have to admit that I also miss my roommate Ryan who was sometimes annoying but still he is one of my best friends too.
